

Resource Connections

Indiana Forestry & Woodland Owners Association

The Division of Forestry takes pride in being a reliable source of natural resource information for landowners. As part of that mission, the Classified Forest & Wildlands Newsletter is starting a new column, “Resource Connections,” to highlight partner organizations that may be of interest to you, such as the Indiana Forestry & Woodland Owners Association (IFWOA).

The IFWOA is a non-profit organization with the mission to promote good stewardship of Indiana’s woodlands. The group is made up of woodland owners and is focused on helping landowners improve their woods. They produce Leaves & Limbs newsletter that covers all things forestry.

IFWOA hosts a woodland owner conference that offers both a field tour and indoor talks. It is a great opportunity to connect with other landowners and share ideas with forestry professionals. The 2018 conference will be Nov. 2-3 at Abe Martin Lodge in Brown County State Park in Nashville, Indiana.

The IFWOA’s Charles Deam Award recognizes an Indiana woodland landowner who does an exceptional job managing their forest. The winner receives a monetary award, a plaque and an outdoor sign. Nominations can be made by anyone and are due by July 1.
